ENRICO CARUSO, the internationally famous star of the opera, will really appear in motion pictures. A little over a week ago it was reported that the celebrated tenor had signed but although negotiations were under way the actual agreements were only closed within the past week. He started work on his first picture about July 15. His first picture will not be adapted from one of the operas, as first supposed, but will be an original story, especially written for him. Plans for Mr. Caruso's initial photoplay were already under way and although we are not able to state at this time, further particulars concerning this film, we can say that it will be an elaborate production staged in a manner befitting the dignity of this famous star and in keeping with Artistic standard. It was pointed out that Mr. Caruso's final decision to accept a motion picture contract was largely prompted by a patriotic motive. His usual summer engagements in Europe seemed out of the question because of war conditions there, and rather than spending these months in idleness the celebrated star of the opera expressed particular pleasure at the opportunity of being busily engaged in artistic endeavor, and incidentally turning over to the government a large sum of money in the way of income and film taxes as a result of his activities before the motion picture camera. Although the terms of the contract are not available, it is understood that the amount of money involved in the agreement is tremendous.

Pretty Gowns for "Eve's Daughter."

In the character of Irene Simpson Bates in "Eve's Daughter," repeating at the Nelson, Miss Burke depicts the life of a girl suddenly left some money by her father who, after a life of repression and hardship, squanders it all on one good time. She nearly outsteps the bounds of convention, but is saved by her father's lawyer—the man who really loves her.

There are many humorous touches in this play, such as the second marriage of the mother who almost literally buys herself a husband thirty years her junior.

Miss Burke, who is famous for her beautiful frocks, will wear many of the very latest design in this picture.

Triangle Story at Dixie.

Law as it is meted out in the north-west is the theme that is handled by the Triangle players at the Dixie today. Margery Wilson appearing in the title role. The picture tells of the manager of the trading post robbing the trappers while he rules them with a rod of iron. Officer Jamison sent to investigate the outrages arrives at the same as does young Morin, son of a rich French-Canadian. The latter goes into the fur trading business, and the trading post manager attempts to ruin him. Marie Petain, daughter of a banker, who has lost his fortune in a bank failure, overhears a plot to kill Morin, and slays one of the plotters just before he fires the fatal shot. She is arrested, and upon telling her story, is released. Plenty of action in the story, and a plot that is calculated to keep one's eye on the screen.

Princess Has May Allison.

The old story of the trustee of an estate using the funds of his ward for his own questionable speculation is the basis of this story. Of course, pay day came and the money must be raised. It always happens too that the only man who can raise the money is in love with the daughter of the reckless speculator. It so happened in the present case, and after the young lover had "cleaned up" on the sale of the Honey Bee Sweets Candy Company, he proceeded to attach the affections of Bee Budkley, none other than the star May Allison, and a happy wedding results.

OLD ENGLISH PLATE FOR SEN HERRICK

Sent to Show Appreciation of His Work in Paris.

NEW YORK, July 18.—It was revealed for the first time today that Governor Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, chairman of the National Finance committee of the War Camp Community Service, has received from the British government a piece of old English plate together with an appreciation from Sir Edward Grey of "the great assistance rendered by you when, as ambassador to the French republic, you remained in Paris after the departure of the French government and the British embassy, and extended your protection to the many British who turned to you for aid and advice."

Although the message was transmitted by the former British Ambassador Sir Cecil Spring Rice in May, 1915, Governor Herrick never consented until now to have this honor made public. The message of transmission said in part:

"His majesty's government desire to ask your acceptance of this piece of old English plate which they hope will serve to you and yours as a memorial of the exertions which you so devotedly and generously employed on behalf of British subjects, both soldiers and civilians, in that time of stress and suffering, and as a token of the King's grateful recognition of the same."

The very latest field for women's work in England is helping to provide eyes for the army and navy by making lenses and prisms. Only women with deft fingers, quick eyes and a gift of patience are taken for this work, which also involves fitting glasses into periscopes, gun sights, field glasses, telescopes and cameras for use on air-craft.
